Based on the different heights of the shafts, the depth of the liquid reservoirs varies from each other and the time it takes for the elevator car to reach the ground after being submerged in the water differs from each other as well.